

Committee Management Overview

Managing a Meeting

- Arrive at the meeting prior to the start time, if possible, to make sure everything is ready. Help the Senate Analyst, if needed.
- Sit next to the Senate Analyst so you can easily communicate during the meeting.
- Minutes from the prior meeting should be approved as soon as a quorum is available.
- The Senate Analyst acts as the committee's parliamentarian to help the Chair run an orderly meeting (per Sturgis).
 - Monitor the attendance to determine when a quorum has been reached.
 - Run the meeting on time.
 - Available to provide background knowledge and information, as needed.

Committee Resources

- The Senate Analyst maintains a web page with each committee's roster, meeting schedule, and relevant committee materials (files, links, etc.).
- Draft (i.e., not yet approved by the committee) minutes can be circulated to the committee via email. They will be posted after they have been approved by the committee, either via email or at the subsequent meeting. Minutes may be approved via email if they need to be posted sooner than the next meeting date.

Monthly Committee Meeting Cycle

- Committee meeting adjourns.
- Within one week after the meeting, the Chair and Senate Analyst follow up on any new issues. The Senate Analyst prepares draft minutes.
- Two weeks prior to the next meeting, the Chair and Senate Analyst discuss the draft agenda.
- One week prior to the next meeting, the Senate Analyst distributes the agenda and materials to the committee. If some or all of the materials are not ready by that time, the Senate Analyst will send a meeting reminder to the committee and let them know that the materials will be distributed as soon as possible.
- The Senate Analyst provides printed meeting agendas and arranges for audio-visual equipment.
